Dr. Rashid Khalidi is currently the Edward Said Professor of Arab Studies in the Department of History at Columbia University. He received his B.A. from Yale University and his D. Phil. from Oxford University. Professor Khalidi has taught at the Lebanese University, the American University of Beirut, Georgetown, and at the University of Chicago. He was the President of the Middle East Studies Association, and an advisor to the Palestinian delegation during the 1991-1993 Arab-Israeli peace negotiations. He is currently the editor of the Journal of Palestine Studies. Dr. Khalidi is the author of seven books, including the recent Brokers of Deceit: How the U.S. has Undermined Peace in the Middle East (2013) and Sowing Crisis: American Dominance and the Cold War in the Middle East (2009).

Dr. Paul Salem is a vice president of the Middle East Institute leading an initiative on Arab transitions. Prior to joining MEI, Salem was the founding Director of the Carnegie Middle East Center in Beirut, where he built a regional think tank. Prior to that, he was director of the Fares Foundation and in 1989 founded and directed the Lebanese Center for Policy Studies. In 2002, Dr. Salem served on the senior review committee for the United Nations Development Program's Arab Human Development Report. He writes regularly in the Arab and Western press and has been published in numerous journals and newspapers. Dr. Salem is the author of a number of books and reports on the Middle East, including the recent Broken Orders: The Causes and Consequences of the Arab Uprisings (in Arabic, 2013) and "Iraq's Tangled Foreign Relations" (2013).
